

Arizona State University - Bachelor of Applied Science Emergency Management & Homeland Security

Over the last few years, many factors have raised the importance of emergency management and homeland security and the need for trained professionals ready to tackle complex issues of both mitigation of and response to natural or man-made disasters.

An undergraduate degree in emergency management opens the door to a challenging career as a professional emergency manager. The advancement of technology has created the potential for more devastating disasters than ever before. As a result, there is an increasing demand for emergency managers who have a solid foundation in scientific and technical disciplines, as well as management skills.

The BAS program is a flexible, 60-credit-hour degree designed specifically for students who have earned an AAS from a regionally accredited institution. The required capstone class provides experience to students through coordinated internships.
